Re: Planning Application: CW9/0311/174

Dear Sir/Madam

Objection to the proposed Midland Pig Producers indoor pig factory at Foston, Derbyshire

We, the undersigned are writing to express our deep concern and objection to the proposed 25,000 pig farm at Foston, Derbyshire.

2014 marks the fifth year since the original planning application was submitted. This is a totally unacceptable length of time for the local community to live under the shadow of this proposed development, which has caused them great distress. Some of these residents live less than 100 metres from the site. There have now been 38,000 representations and objections to the development, which highlights the strength of public feeling against the proposal.

In these past five years a large amount of new evidence has come to light which has further strengthened the Soil Association's original scientific case against the proposal. This evidence outlined the potential damage to human health which units of this scale can cause, particularly due to the increased risk of disease in large units, and the extensive use of antibiotics.

As was reported in The Lancet in November 2013, 26 leading scientists have linked the impact of overuse of antibiotics in agriculture with human and animal antibiotics resistance. Earlier in the year the UK Government's Chief Medical Officer, Dame Sally Davies, warned Parliament that the rise of antibiotic resistance could cause a national emergency comparable to a catastrophic terrorist attack, pandemic flu or major coastal flooding. She told MPs of an 'apocalyptic scenario' where people going for simple operations in 20 years' time die of routine infections 'because we have run out of antibiotics'.

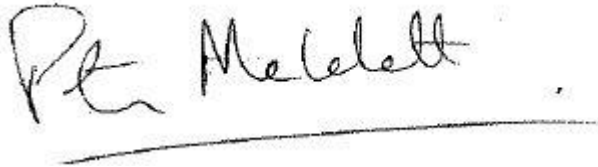

There have also of course been further objections to the original proposal, including from the Ministry of Justice. Given that the proposed site is only around 150 metres from Foston Hall Women's prison, we are unsurprised at this. We have consistently made the point that the staff and inmates at Foston Hall would be at risk from the proposed development. In September 2011, GGD – the Dutch equivalent of our Health Protection Agency – issued a statement warning that, 'no intensive livestock farm should be built within a radius of 250 metres of sensitive locations'. The UK Government's Health Protection agency also stated that those living within 150 metres of intensive pig farms 'could be exposed to multi-drug resistant organisms'.

In our opinion the newer application fails to address both these issues.

Given these wide and compelling objections, we sincerely hope that the planning committee will take this and other evidence submitted by the Soil Association into consideration and vote against the proposal.

Yours sincerely,
