March 2020

Dear Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs,

Protect human health and the environment from pesticide cocktails

We are writing to request that Defra takes urgent action to reduce both pesticide use and pesticide-related harms in the UK.

In particular, we are extremely concerned that the natural environment and our family, friends and ourselves are exposed to cocktails of pesticides in food, water and soil. A growing body of scientific evidence, summarised in our report, The Cocktail Effect, written with PAN UK, shows that mixtures of pesticides can be harmful to human health and wildlife (including insects, fish and birds) even when each individual chemical appears at levels at or below its "no-observed-effect-concentration".

Testing by the Expert Committee on Pesticide Residues in Food (PRiF) reveals that roughly a quarter of all food, and more than a third of fruit and vegetables, contains pesticide cocktails, with some produce revealing traces of up to 14 different active ingredients. Meanwhile, UK flowers, soil and water can contain 10 or more different pesticides in a single sample. Despite this, Maximum Residue Levels are set for just one pesticide at a time and the system fails to assess or limit the sum total of pesticides to which the environment and wildlife are exposed.

It is unlikely that any system will be sufficiently sophisticated to accurately assess the full spectrum of health and environmental impacts of millions of different pesticide combinations which appear in varying concentrations in our food and landscape. The only way to minimise the risk, therefore, is to reduce overall pesticide use, a commitment that the Government has already made in the 25 Year Environment Plan.

In particular, we urge Defra to:

- Introduce measures to support UK farmers to transition to whole farm agroecological systems that include genuine and holistic Integrated Pest Management (IPM), of which organic and agroforestry are well defined examples.
- Ensure that no weakening of UK pesticide regulations or standards occurs as a result of Brexit, including through trade negotiations with non-EU countries, and that in turn food imports meet these same UK standards.
- Establish robust environmental and human health monitoring systems for pesticide use which moves beyond the focus on individual pesticides and is able to assess combined toxic load.
- Introduce a clear, quantitative target for significantly reducing the overall use of pesticides in agriculture.

These actions would be hugely popular. Like us, 78% of the UK public want the Government to provide more support to British farmers working hard to reduce their pesticide use.

We would welcome the opportunity to meet with you to discuss actions that could be taken by Defra to reduce pesticide-related harms. We very much look forward to hearing your response. We are sending this letter, signed by 1772 supporters, in parallel with 308 emails which you will receive directly from PAN UK supporters.

Your Sincerely,

Soil Association with and on behalf of:
